Online Emotional Support Resources: Being resilient means that you can face challenges and difficulties in life. One way of being resilient is by asking for assistance when you need it or just talking to someone who can support you. During these stressful times, it is easy to get overwhelmed and not ask for things that you need. Several state sites have rounded up resources to find help being resilient in turbulent times.

The next step is getting connected to the right kind of mental well-being resources. The Delaware Help is Here website connects you with behavioral health, mental health or addiction help. Whether it is for you or a loved one, support is there to get you through a tough time. If it is an emergency, you can call 911 or the mobile care crisis line 1-800-652-2929.

While these state resources and the following national resources are by no means exhaustive, ASA hopes they will be helpful in seeking qualified professional care.
